Vice President

Designing spells innovation, passion and imagination. I love fashion designing and I love my country India. I am a small town fashion designer with big passion to keep my country's arts and traditions alive by designing my creations with a traditional Indian touch. The main focus of my designs is based on world famous Indian Traditional art "The Madhubani Painting". I have participated in multiple fashion shows at state level as well as national level, presenting Indian tradition in Fashion.

I am a Botany graduate. I did a course in fashion designing from Centre for Education, Ranchi and my masters from Ravindra Vishva Vidyapeeth, New Delhi. I honed my creative skills to make a career in designing instead of being a botanist. In 2003, I joined Marwari College, Ranchi as lecturer in Fashion Designing Dept. after which, I dedicated myself to providing young fashion designers the skills and knowledge that would make them one of India's finest. I love designing designers. Currently, I am the Head Of Department, Fashion designing dept, Marwari college, Ranchi University, Jharkhand. I completed my PhD on the research topic "Role of Indian Traditional arts in latest fashion trends, at national and International level". My research mainly focuses on Madhubani, the traditional art of Bihar and Zardozi, the art of Lucknow.

Entrepreneur

Ms. Aruna Tirkey is an MBA in Rural Development Professional from Xavier Institute of Social Service (XISS), Ranchi. She has more than 15 years of professional career spanned around working on issues related to community health, women empowerment, natural resource management, livelihood development and forest rights under the Forest Rights Act (FRA), 2006. She has extensive experience in working with non-profit organizations, government agencies, bilateral projects and international organizations. Few key professional engagements include Swa-Shakti Project, State level Master Trainer under the Jharkhand State Livelihood Promotion Society (JSLPS) under National Rural Livelihood Mission and research on forest-based livelihood and tribal food nutrition. Most recently, she was the State level Consultant for the UNDP and led the State level FRA cell. Apart from being a committed Rural Development professional, she is a connoisseur of tribal food and cuisine. She stands out for her remarkable initiative on tribal food revival in Jharkhand which she visualizes as a means to strengthen tribal identity and culture that is fast disintegrating. Her food revival mission is named as Ajam Emba (in Kudukh language spoken by Oraon tribe meaning ‘great taste’). She runs her initiative in the mode of for-profit social enterprise and have founded a private limited company with the same name. Belonging to Oraon community, she is possibly one of the first women tribal entrepreneurs in the region. As a part of her food revival initiative, she has established a first of its kind tribal cuisine restaurant and training centre based at Ranchi, Jharkhand. Through her venture she is working to directly benefit more than 100 tribal women and around 5000 farmers and forest produce collectors and have so far exposed local food of Jharkhand to around 35000 people including at local, national and international level. She has presented tribal food of Jharkhand in prestigious national events like International Film Festival at Goa (2018), International Bamboo Festival at Dumka, Jharkhand (2019) and panel speaker at the international Terra Madre event organized at Sapporo, Japan (2019). She is founder of the Jharkhand Slow Food community as a part of International Slow Food Association that works on promoting indigenous traditions and food systems.

With a Bachelor's Degree in Architecture and Masters in Construction Management, I hold nearly 10 years of rich experience in Architecture with some of the best Architectural firms in the country. I'm a keen observer and I believe in hard work. For me, maintaining balance in life is very important. On a personal level, I am creative, organized and detail-oriented by nature. I strive for a healthy balance of time on both personal and professional level. So in short I am an Architect, a traveler, a foodie, a chef, and a home maker. I was born and brought up in Bahraich, a small district in Uttar Pradesh and got married in Ranchi, Jharkhand. I was brought up within a very conservative and protective atmosphere. Today I feel proud to have a successful professional and personal life without compromising on the values and principles that have been inculcated in me while I was growing up.

I am a quick learner and an excellent team player, having strong leadership and administrative skills.
